Market Depressed Abroad but London traders Buy on New York 'Change,

NOTE—All market news on this page reflects closing sale prices (unless buy or bid be specified) Monday, April 28.

New York, N. Y., April 28.—Liquidation was on a broad scale during the morning and the downward movement assumed formidfile proportions on the early trading today. Short selling was aggressive at all points and there was unmistakable evidence also of the throwing over of weak bull accounts.

The speculative fluctuation was virtually unchanged except in so far as the weakness of the European market was reflected here. Despite the depression abroad, London bought stocks here.

At home the demand was still dull, being limited principally to the cover-ing of shorts. Bonds were heavy Early afternoon prices for important issues were on a level with Saturday's

The market closed weak. Floor operators did little, the early severe break in prices and subsequent rebound taking all the vim out of speculation.

I know, from experience, that by June that little backyard will be an ambrosial zarden which Italy might envy. Morning after morning I see the creator at work in it, before he goes to his bread-winning labor elsewhere. On Sundays he works there with a beaming face, which shows how his tired brain revels in such recreation.

Flowers were not made for man, but man was made for flowers. If he shuts his nature against them he descends in the moral scale. There was once a man, driven to desperation by hard fortune, who scaled a fence at night, and stole on tiptoe, with a case-knife in his hand, toward the side windows of a costly residence which he had made up his mind to enter and rob.

He persuaded himself that his necessity justified his transgression. But as he cautionaly crept across the plots and along the paths a little night breeze arose, and borne upon it there came to him from all sides the delicate odors of many kinds of flowers.

Odors Saved Man From Crime.

He stopped like one thunderstruck.

He threw down his knife and thanked God that chance had led him into that garden before crime had stained him; for with the fragrance of the flowers there returned to him the memory of his mather, and he saw her again tending the roses that grew under his window when he was a hoy. For a few minutes he breathed the perfume, and then, with mind cleared and heart strengthened, he retraced his steps to face the world in a hetter mood.

Any One Can Cultivate Flowers.

Everybody can become a cultivator of flowers who has the least bit of soil at his disposal. If you cannot live in the country in the summer, you can, at least, make flowers bloom in a city backyard. But if you have a little suburban garden you may on a small scale instate Luther Burbank himself, making the flowers obey you by taking the hues and shapes that you prefer.

Your garden, however small, will be a little world astir with so much life that you may grow wise in studying it. It will be worth to you and your children a thousand times its cost.

mountain, commanding the city, has been fortified and topped with a battery of heavy artillery.

With only about 500 troops at the capital, Gen. Antonic Rabage, military governor of the state, has ordered even the Parral garrison to move in. This would abandon Parral, center of an American mining and smelting district, to the "Constitutionalists," who appear daily to be growing stronger. The insurgents are estimated to number more than 4000 so far, operating mostly south of Chihunhua city.

The Parral garrison, said to number nearly 2000, will be compelled to fight its way to the capital as "Constitutionalists" continue to hold Santa Rosalia, located between Chihunhua city and Jimenez, the rallway transfer point to the Parral district.
